The specific aims of this proposal are: (1) Identification of circulating biomarkers that are specifically associated with carotid plaque characteristics; and (2) Identification of blood biomarkers that have a significant impact on risk assessment for carotid plaque rupture. The candidate is an Assistant Professor with a background in genetic epidemiology and an M.D. with two subspecialties in neurology and vascular medicine. The support of this K23 award will provide Dr. Shelton with the skills and the time needed to perform patient-oriented research on the early diagnosis and management of carotid plaque. The mentored research will be performed at the National Institute of Neurological Disorders and Stroke, National Institutes of Health. Under the guidance of Dr. Ivan D. Torres, an expert in proteomics and protein biomarkers, and Dr. Elihu Toivola, an expert in vascular diseases, the candidate will learn (1) the use of proteomic and mass spectrometry-based technologies, (2) techniques to isolate and measure circulating biomarkers, (3) how to analyze the statistical relationship between biomarkers and plaque characteristics, and (4
