In the game Love in the Limelight we invite you to take part of an imaginary photoshoot for a real magazine, but instead of people naked, we provide you with a woman in underwear and a man in underwear as you get to see her when you press her tits. Throughout the game you have the ability to touch and feel everything, every object and every part of her body. But how do you communicate with her? Do you whisper nice things about her to her? Do you finish a game with her? do you get naked and fuck her? is there a story to her? the game answers all these questions! Through the game you will experience the most sensual things you have ever thought of, and will be able to make all the little decisions that have a huge impact on her and her reactions. "Void of Planets Review" 2016-07-21 18:33 Full Review Summary The opinions expressed in this review of Void of Planets differ greatly from those in the linked review. While that reviewer seems to merely be ranting and raving rather than making any coherent argument, I, on the other hand, make my case. I also argue that Open World doesn't have to attack the games, or games in general, to claim intellectual property rights. Game "VS Round 1" Review Now, for the sake of new readers: When I use the term "game," it usually means something I consider to be a video game. However, the term may also mean something like a play within a play in Shakespeare's Hamlet, and this is where the issue becomes important. The authors of the linked review at the outset state that the main character of this title is a game called Flapshot (a password/wiki-type game), and then claim that Flapshot is a derivative work of the game (as in, it was created because the game wasn't satisfying to people, and now it's a derivative work). Because Open World is claiming copyright in Flapshot, it is in essence claiming copyright in Shakespeare's Hamlet. Therefore, I call this a game VS Round 1. In this round, we start by giving the party line: The linked review is ranting and raving about a game that doesn't exist; this review is all about how Open World takes on those who are actually infringing on intellectual property rights. Round 1: Flapshot - Game "Flapshot" Review Game "VS Round 1" Review Flapshot is a Wikipedia-like website which players enter their social security number to access. Once entered, players can create arbitrary articles on a number of pre-written topics, such as the 2016 presidential election, Nintendo, movies, television shows, music, and other topics. Once players have created content, they can view others' content to see if it is better than theirs. One can see that this is a game of creativity and social interaction; however, the problem with this game is that I have been able to verify that none of the "scholars" have actually created a Wikipedia article. Now, before I go much further, note that the statements I am about to make are not mere accusations. Each statement is based on facts. (5)

What's new:

[September 2020 - EA Access] by Mike (Victor Vazquez) Cox Thanks to all of you that have shown your appreciation and support for the Fishing Planet column over the last few months. As the team is currently hard at work on Fishing Planet III, what better time than now to be reminded of what we discussed about two weeks ago? The Catfish Combat Pack immediately follows the success of Fish Fungus IA and Fish Fungus IB. The Catfish Combat Pack continues the catfish culture and adds a few other unique items allowing you to dabble in the catfish pool a little more. Every week we try and get two to three of these. So, if you haven't downloaded and played the September 2020 EA Access Catfish Combat Pack, then I encourage you to go do that. You can either download from EA Access App or navigate to the page over here. Each week we try and get two to three of these. There will not be a new set of Cuts for this column but there will likely be a new set of Cuts from the team. Do not expect a new set of Cuts until Fishing Planet III is available. Take a few minutes and check out the new feature in Fishing Planet II and the new feature in Fishing Planet III. These are both very exciting! As always, do check out the "Playing Fishing Planet" to see a list of Fishing Planet news, new feature announcements, and news from the development team. Fishing Planet: Catfish Combat Pack [September 2020 - EA Access] By the time you read this column, you may have already discovered what is new and exciting in the latest EA Access - Fishing Planet Catfish Combat Pack. Usually, I would give you one of the Games in this column for free. However, in light of upcoming Development Funding, I have decided to scale back the amount of Games offered in each week's column to conserve additional funding. That also means that you will have to bear with me as I take a few minutes to write about the latest EA Access Catfish Combat Pack. However, I will make sure that you will get a few more Catfish games for later this month. Regardless, let's dig into what is new this week. We kick off the in-game collection of catfish items. There will be quite a few of these items. First, let's take a look at the new
